Description

Great unpunched copy, content is in great condition, box has some ware/crease mark to it. First Edition

The Army of the Heartland is a strategic-operational simulation of the rebel Army of Tennessee's campaigns during the Civil War. Created by award-winning designer John Prados, and using the same scale and game system as his earlier Campaigns of Robert E. Lee, this game focuses on the critical, but largely ignored actions in Kentucky, Tennessee and northern Georgia between 1861 and 1863. The game includes 560 die-cut counters and two stunning maps depicting the 'heartland.' You also get two army display sheets, a 32 page rulebook with 8 pages of charts and tables and 9 scenarios covering the major engagements. A campaign game scenario covering the whole crucial year of 1863 is also included to allow players to explore the options available to both sides."

Game Scale:

Units: Divisions, brigades and regiments

Ground: One hex = roughly 5 1/4 miles

Time: One turn = 5 days (in Winter, 10 days)

Contents:

560 Die-Cut Counters

Two 34 inch by 22 inch Game Maps

Rulebook with Scenarios, Historical Analysis, plus Charts and Tables
